

Dear Queen Elizabeth,

I hope that you, your family and your corgis are doing well and that your crown is still glistening brightly. Have you been out in your golden carriage recently?

I am writing to you because I have an idea for a new, lavish palace for you. Buckingham Palace looks beautiful but I thought you might like somewhere that you can have more fun in. How great would that be!

The best thing about your new palace is that you will have a giant, refreshing swimming pool in it that has its own powerful waterfall and wave machine. You'll be able to float about on soft rubber rings and relax after a hard day at work. Prince Phillip could join you too if he wanted. Your new palace would also have a huge, modern kitchen with twenty ovens so that you can make lots of cakes for all of your guests. The palace will also have an enormous garden with a colourful flower area, a tricky maze and an exciting fair ground. What a great place that would be for your grandchildren to play in!

I hope that you like my ideas and get to enjoy them one day soon. If you do, perhaps you could invite me over for tea one day. I'd really love to meet you so let me know.

From,

Miss Frith

Ps. I forgot to say that there is also going to be a long, golden slide from your bedroom all the way to the dining room so that you won't have to walk down lots of stairs any more in the morning. I thought that might make it easier for you because of your painful hip and knee.
